

ZACHARY GOES TO BOSTON BRAVES

Veteran Waived Out of A. L.; Won 12 Games in 1929

New York—(P)—Jonathan Thompson Zachary, veteran left handed pitcher who led the American league in games won and lost last year has been waived out of the Barnard circuit and found a berth with the Boston Braves of the National league.

Zachary pitched 120 innings for the New York Yankees in 1929 and wound up the season with a record of 12 victories and no defeats. This year he has been unable to get started and Manager Bob Shawkey asked waivers on him. All other American league clubs passed him up and he passed to the Boston Braves at the interleague waiver price.

Zachary who was 33 years old on May 7, spent 11 years in the American league. He came up to the big leagues from Guilford college in 1918 with the Philadelphia Athletics. He was with Washington the following year and did some fine pitching for the Senators until 1925 when he was traded with Win Ballou to the St. Louis Browns for Bush and Tobin. In 1926 he went back to Washington via the waiver route and the following year went to the Yankees on waivers.

He has a perfect world series record with three victories and no defeats. He won two games for the Senators in the 1924 World's series against the New York Giants, pitching seventeen innings allowing only 13 hits. He worked 1 2/3 innings in the series between Washington and Pittsburgh without receiving credit for a victory or being charged for a defeat. In 1928 he pitched and won one game for the Yankees in the series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

His life-time major league record is 130 victories and 128 defeats.

Pro Golfers Will Not Tarry Long In England

BY LAWRENCE PERRY
Copyright 1930

NEW YORK—Inasmuch as pro golfers who go to Europe for play this season will be obliged to defray their own expenses, it is unlikely that the British open set for late in June, will be marked by the presence of any considerable number of American mercenaries.

Leo Diegel, who went over with the Walker cup team and is now in England, will of course try for the cup now held by Walter Hagen and Horton Smith sailed on April 23, as a sort of lone wolf, minded to seek adventure on many British links. So he, too, will figure in the open. And Tommy Armour is going. So far as is now known, this will about complete the list of eminent American professionals who will participate in the great British events.

Of the amateurs now in England, George von Elm will probably stay on for the open, but the unusually late date will preclude any other notable American entries. The matter of expense, in the case of professionals who go abroad, is not a difficult one when an international team match is on; for then their expenses are paid. But when, as is the case this year, no pro teams are being overseas, they have to dig into their own pockets or else be financed by admiring club employers or in some other way.

Horton Smith's trip abroad is, so far as anyone knows, the purest sort of amateur gesture. He cannot hope to make any considerable sum of money even by winning tournaments in England, where the highest prize will not normally exceed $500. Experience of British links, enhanced international reputation—in these two things is the youthful and popular Missourian investing his winter and early spring earnings.

His experience at Southampton on Tuesday last may well give pause to those who are so confident concerning the prospects of the American Walker cup team at Sandwich next week. In penetrating rain, supplemented by a gale, Horton played in two sweaters and with mittens and even so complained of a chill after the match.

Sandwich is apt to furnish precisely this sort of weather next week and, in such case, it would surprise no one familiar with a "dirty day" on these four links where the American side to take a sound trouncing, thus yielding to England her first Walker cup victory in the history of the trophy.

TEACH YOUTH TO OUTLAW CRIMES, LIONS ARE TOLD

Children Need Wholesome Guidance, Says Chicago Lawyer

Youth must be taught to outlaw crime and gang activities, if the crime situation in the country is to be remedied in the future, C. Ray Hansen, Chicago, member of the Chicago Bar association, told the Lions club and their ladies at the weekly luncheon in Conway hotel Monday afternoon.

It should be the duty of every civic club, Y. M. C. A. and other organizations and institutions to have the welfare of modern youth in mind at all times, and to adopt some kind of program, which will help bring the stranded youngsters into new wholesome environments," he said. "Conditions in the large cities are such that youngsters don't hear or see anything that is wholesome or good. All they have is a good knowledge of its jails, police stations, racketeers, gang tactics, and similar things which pertain to lawlessness."

"Character education in schools, which is slowly starting to take throughout the country, is one of the big factors, which some day probably will help solve the problem. Yet, school should adopt these programs as rapidly as possible, so that the men and women of the future will know the difference between right and wrong politics, and social and economic activities."

Mr. Hansen, who spoke here several weeks ago at the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce, reviewed descriptive sketches from his previous talk, telling members of the club about the recent political gang syndicate of Chicago.

He told the story of his kidnapping on the memorable election day in Chicago in 1928. He also reviewed the activities of the racketeers, and told about his investigation conducted for two weeks in the heart of England on the south side of Chicago.

Chicago isn't bad as most people picture it to be," he said. "It is one of the most progressive cities in the world. Most people think that physical crimes occur daily on the streets of Chicago, but that is not true. Crimes on the main streets of Chicago are of rare occurrence."

The heart of the trouble lies in the tremendous syndicate headed by Al Capone and his cohorts, who live on the south side. His warriors are the uneducated and ignorant foreigners who are constantly looking for trouble. They are the tools of the underworld, and their children as well as those of respectable families, need our help. They should be taken into our homes, and institutions such as the Y. M. C. A., and taught about wholesome things.

DISTRIBUTION IS SMALL PART BACK OF ELECTRIC COSTS

Average for Homes Is Two Cents Per Kilowatt Hour, or Less

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of 4 articles by Morris Llewellyn Cooke, noted Philadelphia public utilities expert, on electric rates for the home. Cooke directed Governor Pinchot's giant power survey in 1921, the biggest thing of the kind ever attempted.

BY MORRIS LLEWELLYN COOKE
Noted Expert on Electric Rates
Since the public has been commonly aware of the slight cost of generating electricity, utility companies have emphasized the alleged high cost of distribution.

"Oh, yes," one hears. "We could afford to furnish the current for nothing. What costs is distributing it—getting it to the place where the consumer wants to use it."

I have undertaken to prove, in a number of ways which I have outlined, that there is nothing to this statement. For a use of 350 kilowatt hours a year—a recent nation-

HOW RATES VARY
Here is another table showing some of the varying domestic electric light rates charged by privately owned utilities over the United States. The figures are top rates (in cents) per kilowatt hour and when not on a straight-line basis apply to from the first 10 to the first 200 kilowatt hours consumed. Average domestic consumption is around 39 kilowatt hours a month. Many electricity companies allow prompt payment discounts and some have special rates for cooking and heating.

al average—the cost of distribution amounts to about 2 cents a kilowatt hour; for 500 kilowatt hours a year this falls to 13 cents and for 1000 kilowatt hours annually the distribution item is about 2 of a cent.

"WHAT TRAFFIC WILL BEAR?"
When power companies in New York state charge as high as 17 cents per kilowatt hour it is time that the public rejects the plea that the high rate of electric current is due to the high distribution costs. The fact simply is, as I have stated before, that the electricity companies simply charge what the traffic will bear.

The distribution system is part of the entire equipment of the utility which is most in evidence to the average citizen. It includes the wires, poles, cables, conduits, line transformers, service, meters and the various accessories of that equipment over which current is conveyed from the substations to the consumers' premises.

In a modern electric utility, mass generation and mass transmission through the principal substations absorb practically 65 per cent of the entire annual costs, street lighting about 5 per cent and distribution costs plus direct consumer costs account for about 30 per cent.

$7.50 IS YEARLY AVERAGE
We have demonstrated, as shown in my publication called "On the Cost of Distribution of Electricity to Domestic Consumers," that the annual cost of distribution assignable to the great majority of the so-called light or domestic consumers is about $7.50, of which about $3.00 is due to capital and maintenance charges for meter, transformer and service wires. Within certain limits of consumption of kilowatt hours per month or year, this $7.50 may be

Wreckers Take Napoleon's Old Home

This historic French landmark—the house in which Napoleon Bonaparte lived when, as a young lieutenant of artillery, his dreams of world empire took form—has been turned over to the wreckers. Napoleon occupied the small attic room, indicated here by a cross, under the roof-ties. A modern building is to replace the ancient structure.

considered in the nature of a flat or fixed charge.

This conclusion is based on analysis of data from 45 privately owned and 19 publicly owned plants. Electric service companies do not keep costs in the sense that costing is practiced in other industries primarily as a means of managerial control, but also for pricing. In his study of distribution costs the writer was forced to go to great lengths in solving what in a shoe factory or a paper mill would be a very simple problem.

Data at hand shows the annual cost per consumer of those portions of the distribution system comprising the line transformers and the consumers' meters. Here are some representative costs in that category:
Cambridge, Mass., $2.70; Holyoke,
Mass., $2.83; Brooklyn, N. Y., $2.90;
Rumford Falls, Me., $3.03; Pasadena, Calif., $3.14; Jamestown, N. Y., $3.22;
Washington, D. C., $3.43; Buffalo, N.
Y., $3.48 and Portland, Me., $4.28.
The cost in all the cities of the province of Ontario, where the average domestic electricity rate is below 2 cents, is $4.00.

COSTS IN ONTARIO
If consumption could be built up to such figures as prevail in Ontario where the average domestic consumer uses 1070 kilowatt hours annually, the cost of distribution would become approximately 73 mills per kilowatt hour. The domestic rates in Ontario are such that high annual consumption takes place with an actual average revenue per kilowatt hour sold to domestic consumers in 1927 of 2.66 cents. This covered the cost of generating and transmitting the current and general expenses, as well as costs of distribution.

It is the experience of a number of electric utilities, that where the maximum domestic rate is under 6 cents, the average consumption per domestic consumer can be raised to better than 500 kilowatt hours a year and with rates still lower the consumption may reach 1000 or over as experienced in Ontario. A high first step in domestic rate schedules appears to have a real deterring effect on consumption.

GIVES "FAIR COST"
A fair cost per kilowatt hour delivered to domestic consumers for all charges from production to administrative costs will normally fall between 3.30 cents to 4.50 cents per kilowatt hour or a yearly payment by the typical domestic consumer of between $10.90 and $20.50. Of this amount substantially $12.00 a year is a cost which will not vary materially whether the attached consumer takes no current or consumes up to about 1000 kilowatt hours a year.
If a service charge of that amount

RADIO PIRATE IS GIVEN SENTENCE IN LEAVENWORTH

First Time Since Act Was Made Law That Teeth of Measure Are Felt

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Washington—(CPA)—The teeth of the radio law are felt for the first time with the conviction of George W. Fellowes, of St. Louis, for pirating of radio programs, deceiving the listening audience, and operating a broadcasting station without federal license.
Fellowes, a British subject, was sentenced by the United States district court in St. Louis for flagrant violation of radio law, to serve a year and a day in Leavenworth. It was the first time since the radio act was made law in 1927, that a case of this character has been brought to trial and carried to sentence. Because defendant is an alien, immigration authorities have brought action for his immediate deportation to England in lieu of serving his sentence.

The case was unprecedented in radio law. Although occasional reports of the operation of unlicensed stations are received, the Fellowes suit was one involving the broader issue of program piracy, or the re-broadcasting of programs of licensed stations without permission or credit.

HE STOLE PROGRAMS
In October, 1929, when the federal authorities began accumulating evidence against Fellowes, he was re-broadcasting, with regularity, programs of stations WJW, in Chicago, WENR, Chicago, and KMOX and KWK, in St. Louis. He would pick these programs up on a broadcast receiver, and place the microphone on his own unlicensed transmitter close to the incoming loudspeaker, and in that way rebroadcast or "boot leg" them, according to testimony in the case. This outlaw station used the unlicensed call letters WNR.

Instead of permitting the announcements of the originating stations, required each 15 minutes, by law, to go over his station, Fellowes would "break in" himself and give to the listening audience the impression that he originated the programs, or that they were from some station in a foreign country. According to the evidence. Besides the charges of violation of the law, it was contended that the operation of the outlaw station constituted interference with reception of other stations.

There have been, since broad-

ing began less than decade back, some 50 or 60 court cases involving radio, but the Fellowes case is the first in which the penal provisions actually have been invoked.

While making his new broadcast garden, W. J. Brooks of Washington, Iowa found $80 in gold coins.
Dates ranged from 1842 to 1859.

AMERICAN "CULTURE"

A negro in a little Texas town assaults a white woman, and is arrested and lodged in jail, to await trial and punishment. A mob forms. The national guard is called to preserve order. There is shooting from rifles and machine guns. There are tear bombs thrown. The court house is set on fire. The prisoner is lodged in a fireproof and burglar-proof vault for safekeeping. The courthouse is partially burned. The mob blasts and burns him out with dynamite and acetylene torches, then drags the body through the streets with wild cheers and burns it on a public funeral pyre. Showing how little the human race has risen above savagery.

This mob undoubtedly was composed of people who ordinarily are decent and law-abiding citizens, kindly and orderly in their family and social relations. The victim of their fury himself may have been rather a decent fellow ordinarily. But it is hard to maintain standards, especially crowd-standards. Mobs are worse than the individuals composing them. And many a self-righteous horror-struck critic of that mob, if on the spot, would have been caught up by the wave of madness and behaved like the rest. We are not so far removed from the barbarous stage as we like to imagine. So far as a comparison of European standards, which we ignorantly like to sneer at, and American, we recall nothing over there in recent generations half so diabolical. One can imagine the reaction Europeans must get out of this exhibition of American "culture."

WORLD BANK

German reparations will now proceed to reparate more regularly and efficiently than ever. This, at least, is the general expectation. The Young plan has gone into effect. A bank for international settlements has been organized at Basle, Switzerland. The first act of that bank will be the issuance of $300,000,000 of reparations bonds. This interests Americans, who as usual are expected to furnish most of the funds.

It has even been charged that the latest stock crash in Wall street was engineered by financial interests who wanted to divert money from stocks to reparation bonds. That, however, does not seem very credible. Not because financial interests are incapable of it, but such action is probably unnecessary. American investors are usually generous toward foreign securities of this sort. And indeed, they might do worse now. Money put into those bonds may come back in more than one way. It will make reparation payments more prompt and sure. We haven't much money coming from Germany; but if she pays the allies, they can pay us more readily.

RELIGION AND PROSPERITY

The annual census of the Christian Herald shows an increase of only 300,000 in the membership of Christian denominations in the United States last year, compared with an increase of 1,000,000 the year before. Dr. H. K. Carroll, compiler of the census, interprets the figures thus:

The church is not dying, as some cynics would have us believe. And if it is losing its hold on the people, there is nothing in these statistics to show it. During a year when business receded, when many publications lost circulation, when the membership of hundreds of civil and social organizations dropped notably, it would have been an achievement for the religious bodies merely to hold their own. But they have done better—they have gained, made one of the most remarkable gains of all things considered, since the days before the great war.

He may be right. A layman, however, might have suggested that the churches gained less last year than the year before because the year as a whole was more prosperous. Business grew but only toward the end of the year. It is an old observation that adversity drives people to religion and prosperity drives them away.

SPECIAL POSTAGE STAMPS

There is to be another special stamp issued by the postoffice department, a two-center commemorating the Battle of Braddock, otherwise known as Braddock's Defeat. On July 8 and 9 will be celebrated the 175th anniversary of that event.

The department may seem to be going a little out of its way to help celebrate a bit of colonial history which, though important, was little more than a skirmish near the present Pittsburgh between a small British force and a few French and Indians. It is memorable chiefly for the presence of George Washington, then a young man, as Gen. Braddock's aid. Braddock was mortally wounded. Washington saved the day for the British, or didn't, according to whether you read old-fashioned school history or recent biography.

There has been some complaint lately about the multiplicity of special postage stamps. There always seems to be at least one sound reason, though, for issuing them. They are bought up in such quantities by collectors that they usually produce a profit and help reduce the postal deficit.

PASSIVENESS IN AMERICA

Mahatma Gandhi's revolutionary policies are not so peculiar as they look at first glance. We may smile at the phrase "civil disobedience," yet we have plenty of that right around us here in America. As for "general passive resistance" and "nonpayment of taxes," in what American community are they unknown?

There is hardly a county in the United States where the collection of taxes, whether for personal property or real estate, is not a serious problem. The federal government has plenty of trouble with its income tax. Everywhere there is effort to dodge inheritance taxes.

The most notable example of passive resistance at present is the widespread disregard of the prohibition laws. But American disregard for law in general is freely admitted. Gandhi could learn a good deal about civil disobedience over here. Only we don't call it revolutionary. By some curious mental twist, even while disobeying the laws we don't like, we often regard ourselves as loyal and conservative citizens.

CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGNS

Spring clean-up campaigns are staged about this time every year in many communities. This year they have a double purpose in sections where there has been serious unemployment. One city has for its slogan, "Clean Up and Give Odd Jobs to the Jobless."

The special activities of such a campaign deserve attention. In addition to straight cleaning, emphasis is placed on making all needful repairs, eliminating fire hazards, disposing of old clothing, furniture, books, magazines and so on to organizations that can make good use of them, such as social agencies and libraries. Some clean-up committees put in a special health day and make available information about the relation between cleanliness and health. Beauty is sought as a by-product of cleaning up. It comes when rub-bish-strewn yards give place to lawns and flowers.

This work need not be confined to homes. Industrial concerns, business offices, schools and churches should share in it. A vigorous week of cleaning, painting and planting should be very good for any community's soul.

REDUCING IMMIGRATION

The United States senate has voted to reduce immigration from Europe to 1 per cent of the representation of the various nationalities in this country in 1890. This will cut the number of immigrants from 150,000 to 80,000 a year. Before the war, such arrivals often numbered nearly 1,000,000 a year. We are reducing immigration with a vengeance, even when allowance is made for the numbers pouring in from countries of the western hemisphere. These latter, it is expected, will be put on a quota basis too, and better supervision will be exercised, so that there will be fewer of them.

Such a policy is probably best for the country. There will be a new era in citizenship, dating perhaps from the World War. By the year 1990 it will be hard to find an American who does not regard himself as a 100 per center, rooted in the country from antique days.

Germany is the largest producer of patent leather in Europe, having an annual output of about 55,000,000 square feet and ranks second in the manufacture of sole leather.

A DOG must, of necessity, lead a dog's life because—well, you see what we mean. But what we meant to comment on was the recent slur at the canine race. Down in Illinois, dog racing has been declared illegal despite the fact that horse racing is quite all right with the courts. It's going to be tough on the horses if all the pooches in the middle west decide to go on a sympathy strike.

The ironical twists which Fate sometimes takes is only too well exemplified in the case of a despondent mother who shot three children and killed herself. . . . and the tragedy was discovered just before Mother's Day.

Musical Notes

Isbarn Jones has been succeeded in Milwaukee by another worthwhile group of tootlers—Charles Straight and his orchestra.

Add good tunes: "I'm In the Market for You."

To Quote a Passable Gag—

"The Anti-Saloon League's latest venture is to abolish public funerals. . . . the object is to prevent people from passing around the beer."

The other day we mentioned something about heart balm as demanded in a breach of promise suit. The other day we pondered about that for a while, and suddenly a thought, clear as the morning sunrise hit us. (Voice from the Kitchen Cynic: "When did YOU ever have a thought—when else could the sun rise?")

Well, anyway, it was all about the girl we once knew who was so dumb that she thought heart balm was something like Sloan's Liniment. (adv.)

Today's Anniversary

MARIA THERESA'S BIRTH

On May 13, 1717, Maria Theresa, Empress of Austria, was born in Vienna.

When her father, Charles VI, died, Maria, heiress of his dominions with the title of Queen of Hungary, was but 23 years old. She was without experience or knowledge of the business of state and her husband, reigning duke of Tuscany, while liked for his geniality, was no leader.

Trouble came thick and fast for Maria after Charles' death. First, several claimants arose for the throne and then Frederick of Prussia, greedy and avaricious, sought to seize Silesia while Hungary was in its disturbed condition. While no one succeeded in supplanting Maria from the throne, Frederick, taking advantage of the fact Hungary's army was dispersed and her treasury exhausted, marched into Hungary and captured Silesia.

There were domestic as well as international problems worrying the young queen. The Magyars, although they were sympathetic toward and loyal to the young queen, insisted on their rights for representation. After her coronation she succeeded in settling amicably with the Magyars.

LOOKING BACKWARD

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Tuesday, May 10, 1905

Miss Abbie Hoh and Arnold Herrmann were married that afternoon at the Lutheran church in Menasha.

A marriage license had been issued to John H. Zimmer, Antigio, and Anna Doenecker, Appleton. Miss Lizzie Gehring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gehring, Grand Clute, and John Kampe, were married that morning at St. Joseph church.

Edward J. Hermann and family were Neenah visitors that day.

Miss Louise Otto had left recently for a brief visit with relatives at Phillips.

Miss Lizzie Becker and John Wachter were married that morning.

Mrs. Francis Ebert returned the day before from a week's visit with her daughter in New London.

A METHOD OF RELAXATION DEvised BY AUGUSTUS THOMAS.

In telling about it, in what purports to have been a letter actually written to his son about to go to France, and afterward published in the New York Sunday Sun, Aug. 19, 1917, Augustus Thomas, famous playwright, used 13 columns, but the actual instructions were as follows:

"Lying down helps greatly to remove this pressure, but the Japanese slow pull on the head does it at once. A man can do it somewhat for himself by lifting his shoulders as he lies on his back and 'hunching' them along as if trying to get them as far as possible from his belt. When I'm on my back for my two minutes rest cure I take two or three such hunches at intervals, trying to hold my gain each time by an anchorage of the shoulder blades against the carpet. Generally I can hear the vertebrae as they slip from their packed contact to an easier adjustment. . . ."

Mr. Thomas developed his idea more than ten years ago when the imagination of many laymen with primitive conceptions of anatomy and physiology was intrigued, in the proper meaning of the word, by a curious fad or cult of healing that ascribed all complaints to some such subtle displacements of the bones of the spine—displacements so very subtle that none but a barber or a grocery clerk who had spent a term or two as headquarters could detect them. It is strange how people without any technical knowledge of the subjects they're dealing with delight to map out their own novel ways of health or conjure up bizarre theories of the nature and cure of disease.

"... I can hear the vertebrae as they slip from their packed contact to an easier adjustment, especially if in my hunching I have lifted my head so that some pull is put on the spinal column. Sixty seconds of such rest is worth an hour in a chair. Richard Harding Davis told me, or maybe it was Irvin Cobb, 'I heard tell of the German soldiers utilizing even a few minutes halt to throw themselves on the ground flat and extended.'"

The playwright's elaborate hokum in connection with his habit of relaxing for a few moments when the opportunity came was natural for one in his trade. The practice of the soldiers dropping for a moment's rest whenever they had the chance was not at all exclusive among Germans.

Just the same, Mr. Thomas had the right idea. Follow the suggestion sometime in the midst of your business hour and you will admit, at least, that it does no harm. I assure you that it can do a lot of good. I'll endeavor to explain precisely how and why it does good in later talks on the physiology of rest. Here is a little more of the Thomas letter:

"To relax is somewhat of an art. It can't be fully done without a deep breath first and then the 'let go.' One can't relax from 'half tension' as it were. Often we think we are relaxed only to find after hours of waiting, when utter exhaustion slumps us, that we have been in some respect holding ourselves away from the bed."

Ain't it the truth? "A rehearsal in the theatre is a dire thing for fighting one up who is directing it and unconscious of it, lifting each character. After many years I've come to recognize the condition in time, and often in the dark auditorium, when the actors or scrubwoman can't see me, I lie supine on the carpet in an aisle or the foyer and with arms outstretched for a minute relax all over. It isn't so simple as it sounds. Even after the deep breath one has to think down to the very finger tips and toes, and by mental command dislodge the accumulated tension. Then last of all, the muscles of the face—to let them fall with half closed eyelids and the lips slipping away from the teeth as they do on dead men. It's quite astonishing what a refreshing indulgence even a half minute of such relaxing is. As I've said, it is an art to do it and very useful when you get it."

A distinguished physician and physiologist will contribute (involuntary) to our knowledge of the art of relaxing, in subsequent talks on the subject, thru his book recently published by the University of Chicago Press.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Why Do Trained Nurses Wear Slippers?

I attended the New York State School of Agriculture and in hygiene class we were discussing ventilation. We could not agree on the reason why trained nurses remove flowers from the sick room at night. P. E.)

Answer.—It is like the reason the drummer wears red suspenders—utilitarian; the maid is having her night off. Old time nurses had some vague notion that flowers used up the air at night, or something like that. Today if the nurse asks the maid to take the flowers out of the sickroom for the night it is to make more room or to save the flowers.

The Gender of Hygiene. Please glance at the circular letter enclosed and tell me what it means. I can't understand it. Mrs. C. S. B.)

Answer.—The letter purports to come from a "trained nurse" who is trying to learn something for the benefit of a gang of eminent but anonymous physicians. The main thing the nurse wants to know is what the recipient of the letter "feminine hygiene" means. To a normal mind in a healthy body it doesn't mean a thing. Hygiene is not a matter of gender.

Desquamation by the use of water cooled quartz tends to smooth the skin. (H. C. J., M.D.)

Answer.—Dr. J. is a reputable plastic surgeon.

Protrusion. Is it true that this appliance or remedy will cure hernia as claimed in the slip enclosed? (K. R. T.)

Answer.—The slip proclaims that aid to personal health service rupture is not a tear nor break to heal, but just a weakness in the wall, so muscle of the abdominal wall. So far it is true. Then comes the lumping part. Of course there is no cure for rupture (breach, hernia) in an adult except surgery. This does not mean that a small or incomplete hernia never disappears spontaneously, nor that it is useless to try simple exercises while holding the weak place with the hand. It means that you can't reasonably expect any lasting relief from complete or established hernial protrusion unless you undergo operation. (Copyright John F. Dille Co.)

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THE kindly clock man worked away and Cloway said, "That's just like play. Is that all you must do—just paint big numbers on the clocks?" The clock man said, "I see that you don't understand what I must do, to make each little time-piece have the proper ticks and tocks."

"Each clock, inside, has gears, you know, and they're the things that make it go. It is my job to put these gears together in each one. They are so small, I must admit it's sometimes hard to make them fit. If you should work at this all day, you wouldn't think it fun."

"He's right," cried Cloway. "Yes, indeed! A nice watch once belonged to me, and once looked inside of it to see what made it go. I touched a little spring and then, I couldn't make it run again. So, when he says

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY HERBERT PLIMMER

Washington—When Tony Griffin, who represents the county of the Bronx and New York City in the house, outlined his biographical qualifications as a member of congress for the Congressional Directory, he wrote:

"Graduated with honors as prize essayist of the year at New York university."

It was more than 35 years ago when he won this distinction, but his ability along this line has suffered little.

Glance in the appendix of the Record for April 15, and there you will find the nearest little bit of essaying that this prize essayist of a quarter of a century ago ever turned out.

It is a Socratic dialogue between a citizen and a soldier. The two engage in an elaborate discussion of a bill recently introduced by the New York legislature that citizen ship shall not be denied to those mentally, morally, and otherwise qualified because of their religious views or philosophical opinions concerning war.

CONVERSION

In true Socratic style, the author leads his citizen and his soldier step by step to an inevitable conclusion.

After Justice Holmes' decision in the recent Schvimmer case, belief in war and religious bodies against war had been thoroughly thrashed out between the two—the citizen always skeptical—Tony has his soldier convert his citizen to the Griffin bill in the following manner:

"SOLDIER: All this bill does is to waive the requirement that a person should answer under oath, at the time of naturalization, just precisely what he or she would do in the event of war."

"CITIZEN: And it does not excuse them from serving the country in time of war?"

"SOLDIER: No. In time of war . . . every citizen must obey the laws and do his duty."

"CITIZEN: I guess that's about right."

And, presumably, the citizen goes forth to crusade for the Griffin bill.

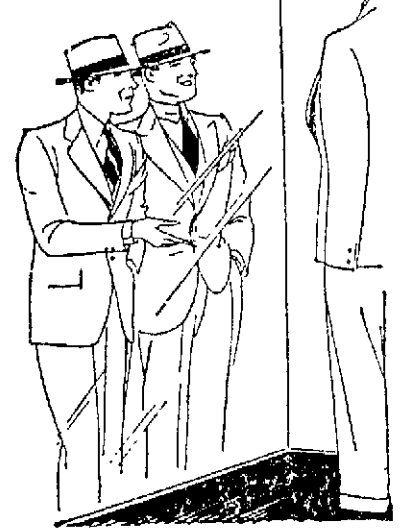

SOLDIER HIMSELF

Of course, the soldier in the dialogue is Tony himself. The 12th and 69th regiments of the New York national guard have his name on their roster.

If his Socratic method of pushing legislation in which he is interested proves successful, there are other ideas to which he subscribes that he might well apply it to.

Shortly after he entered congress he offered a resolution providing that all constitutional amendments be submitted directly to the people of the various states instead of to legislatures.

His conviction that with respect at least to the prohibition amendment "the votes of the respective legislatures did not properly express the popular will" certainly lends itself to dialogue treatment.

PEOPLE CAN BUY BETTER NOW THAN IN LAST 10 YEARS

Dollar Goes Farther Today Than at Any Time Since World War

BY J. C. ROYLE
Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press
Washington—(CUP)—The American people can buy more advantageously today than at any time in 10 years, according to scientists who have just completed a study of figures showing the cost of living from 1914 to date.

A dollar goes farther today than since the great war closed, and even in the last week has been a further drop in the commodity markets. Moreover, citizens now are buying more carefully and taking full advantage of bargains and seasonal trends. The old days of 1920 when price was a minor item and desire was the sole ruling factor in buying, have gone out of the picture.

Economists in the government service here declare that this is done more to prevent the present business depression from becoming more extensive than almost any other factor. Those who gave thought to living expenses are content to eat pork chops and oranges in these months when they are most plentiful and cheapest, instead of during the period when fruits and vegetables and other products become rarities or semi-luxuries.

LOW POINT NEAR
The low point of the year is now approaching, so far as general food prices are concerned. The low usually comes in April but the weather has been of such a character as to delay production of certain foodstuffs in some areas. Roast chicken costs more after June 30 than before and so does a rib roast of beef. Butter prices are not expected to advance much if any until next September. Eggs, however, are likely to be higher in the summer than in the autumn and winter.

Beef prices normally follow the volume of livestock marketings, which is heavier in the spring and fall. At those times, or following them, beef prices normally can be expected to drop.

The season from now until June is the cheapest time of the year as far as heat, light and rent are concerned. Of course, rentals are higher in the resort areas but normally they are lower in the cities and industrial centers. Furnaces are not needed, fuel for cooking is not consumed so heavily, because of summer menus calling for cold foods, and daylight hours are longer and less lighting current is required.

The level of clothing prices is still high as compared with other commodities. Cigarette prices are low and those for cigars have shown a remarkable decrease, for equal quality, through employment of automatic wrapping machines. Prices of papers, books and magazines have declined in recent years and volume has mounted in corresponding measure.

More money is being spent for games and recreation than last year.

MAY HOLD SWIMMING SCHOOL AT Y. M. C. A.

A learn-to-swim school for Appleton men and women and boys and girls is being considered by Appleton Y. M. C. A. for the next week period immediately after the closing of schools, according to Arthur P. Jensen, physical director of the association.

Plans now are to hold the classes which will give about six hours' instruction for men and boys only. The plans to give women and girls instruction still are being considered and will not materialize unless Appleton Women's club enters into the project, it was said.

After the city-wide school the association will begin classes in swimming and life saving for its own members.

at this time, but the expense per capita is less in most sections. Cost of sporting equipment is high but prices for some products in the luxury class, such as radios, motor boats and phonographs, are on a relatively low level. Prices for golf, tennis and swimming equipment show little change compared with last spring and only a moderate recession in volume of sales. Candy prices are higher but ice cream and soda water and soft drink show little if any change.

TURKEY MAY SELL GEMS OF OTTOMAN EMPIRE

Istanbul, Turkey—(AP)—Sale of the crown jewels of the Ottoman empire, valued at about $300,000,000, today was forecast by the semi-official daily newspaper "Ejmenet" to raise money to relieve Turkey's economic crisis.

The jewels, part of which are on exhibition in the museums of Istanbul and the remainder hidden in Angora, include the peacock throne, studded with 30,000 jewels. This single relic is estimated to be worth $15,000,000. There is still another throne in the collection containing one of the world's largest emeralds and a whole box full of diamonds and pearls.

The newspaper says that no government statement can be expected at present, as the republic naturally is anxious to preserve its historic treasures and will put off the sale until all other hope of financial help fails.

Beauty

It is not sufficient that furniture worthy of fine American homes should be merely of flawless materials handled with the consummate skill of the craftsman in wood. That could be taken for granted and yet the result would fail to satisfy the lover of fine furniture.

It is something else, quite apart from material and its manipulation, which makes worth while the selection of worthy materials and their fashioning into fine furniture. Without that something else only technical excellence in wood joinery and finish is to be expected.

FEW men or women go through life without BORROWING

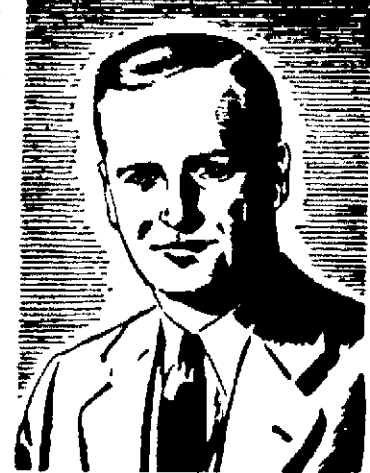

PEOPLE always have, and always will, turn to their fellowmen for help in emergencies. Business firms and some individuals can borrow from banks by putting up stocks, bonds, or real estate for security. Millions of good people without banking facilities do not realize that they can now obtain $100 to $300 without the embarrassment of asking friends for the money.

Because of the hardships imposed upon the average family by its inability to borrow, the Household Plan was developed. Under it, most families keeping house can make a loan of $100 to $300 with the same privacy afforded by a bank.

If you need extra funds to pay up some scattered bills; buy some of the things you've wanted, such as clothing or household supplies; perhaps, pay for necessary medical attention; or meet any of the other demands of everyday life—don't hesitate to come to "Household" for the money.

A convenient plan can be arranged whereby you repay your loan on a budget basis. No outside signers are required, and no inquiries are made among your friends or through your employer. "Household's" rate is the lowest rate possible, consistent with the service we render—it is nearly one-third lower than the maximum lawful rate.

You will find "Household" Managers to be friendly, courteous advisers in all home financial problems. The experience gained by this company during its five-year history of public service is back of them. They will be glad to give you the benefit of this accumulated experience as well as their own training in arranging a budget plan to suit your needs. Any family in financial difficulties will find "Household" Managers ready and willing to consider arranging for a loan of $100 to $300.

In this community "Household" makes loans of less than $100 at a slightly higher rate than the rate on loans of $100 to $300.

on hand will more than cover this indebtedness.

Despite the lack of a director during part of the winter, the major branches of the recreation work of the club were carried on without a break. The club has voted to continue the girl scout work through the summer and to assist in financing the scout camp.

Mrs. Clippinger gave a resume of the monthly meetings of the club, and read the reports of the office secretary and of the health committee.

The report of Mrs. R. N. Clapp, secretary, showed that 521 women and girls seeking employment had passed through the office, that 13 social welfare cases had been handled, and that 28 private patients and 133 regular meetings of various groups, as well as 11 luggage sales, had been arranged. Mrs. Clapp is acting as probation officer for one case from the state board of control.

The health report revealed the efforts of the club health committee to establish a fresh air school in Appleton. After discovering from a chest clinic held a year ago that 25 children needed the benefits of such a school, the committee visited neighboring schools, gained the consent of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association to use the annual seal sale money for equipment and remodeling and solicited felts for blankets from several paper mills.

However, when interviewed, the board of education, though interested in the establishment of a fresh air school, felt that it owed its first support to the crippled children school, as that project had been presented earlier.

Some of the Christmas seal sale money has been used to purchase milk for school children, and $500 of it is still available to be used for equipment for a Fresh air school.

How I Save Work!

"When I use CHEERIO for dishes and the washing it's a pleasure to do the work," says Olive B. West of Ishpeming, Mich. "Clothes are cleaner, dirt comes off the dishes so easily, and it takes me less time."

Still another woman sings the praises of CHEERIO—the amazing three-way discovery that softens hard water, soaks dirt loose, whitens clothes. CHEERIO wants to do your hardest work—grimy floors, heavy wash, greasy pans. And it can't hurt delicate fabric. Use only half as much as old soaps. Try it just once—then you too will be a CHEERIO fan. 10c and 25c sizes at all grocers. Made by KIRK.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 by NEA Service, Inc.

THEN as suddenly Jack let Sue go.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I'm not sorry. I don't know what came over me. I... Oh, hell!"

He walked to the window and stared out and Sue, the kisses still burning on her lips, put her hand on them softly.

"It's all right," she said at last in a thin little voice that seemed to drift in from a long distance. "I guess we'd better go report the man."

Jack was very quiet, very efficient, but strangely impersonal during the rest of the evening. Ronald, furious with himself because he had waited below, not knowing of the danger threatening Sue, still had a wondering question in his eyes because she had not told him of the ring that was still in her possession.

Into this scene a little later, Corinne came walking. Ronald and Sue exchanged glances which pledged each other to say nothing about the strange meeting which Corinne had had with Harry Becker, and which they had witnessed. Ten minutes later Harry also came.

Sue sensed the difference in him at once. He was solicitous and at tentative but it was almost as though he knew that Sue and he were finally together. But he wasn't happy. Instead there seemed to be release of youth and joy about him.

Was he glad that she didn't want him? Sue wondered? Well, he didn't think that she would take anyone who didn't love her... and whom she didn't love? What had Jack meant? She was being questioned about the intruder and had to put aside her own thoughts.

"We know now why this wandering Orpheus got a job playing at The Doughnut," Ronald summed up the situation. "It gave him a good opportunity to spy out the land and find out what the visiting jewel boxes offered. He wanted to be here at this particular time."

"But I can't see why anyone who plays so beautifully could be so terrible," Sue puzzled.

"It's because you think everyone is as true and fine as you are, Sue," Jack answered in a nonchalant voice, but his eyes didn't smile when his lips did.

"Oh, he does like me, he does like me," her heart was saying over and over again. She forgot the explanation that was due Ronald, the coming scene with Jack.

"I've certainly given you a mean time, Sue," Harry spoke to her in a low tone. "Nothing but a lot of discomfort from the very first. Is there anything I can do now?"

"Nothing at all. You've been wonderful all day. Sue wondered if, he too, caught the farewell in her words. It seemed very strange, though such a few hours had passed since her decision, that she had once intended to marry Harry.

And close on that thought another one tumbled. What did Harry know about Corinne? Why had he met her that evening?

She wasn't surprised when Corinne curled up in a big chair when they were alone in their room, ran her slender fingers through her tempestuous curls, and watched her with cloudy eyes.

"Sue, I've got to tell you something," she said suddenly.

NEGRO MAY FURNISH BRAND NEW PROBLEM IN POLITICAL WORLD

Vote on Confirmation of Judge Parker Brings Fact to Front

BY LEMUEL F. PARTON
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
New York—(CPA)—The number of Negroes employed by the municipal government of New York city has increased 555 per cent in the last nine years. This fact, flashed up Saturday against the senate's refusal to confirm Judge Parker for the supreme court, is one detail of many showing increased political awareness and solidarity among the millions of recently unbanished northern Negroes.

Both Senators Copeland and Wagner of New York voted against confirmation of Judge Parker, as did Senators Deneen and Glenn, of Illinois and Vandenberg and Couzens of Michigan, all representing centers of large and newly acquired negro population. Not only in New York but in other cities have the Negroes made rapid advances in the last 10 years in landing on city payrolls. Whether the transplanted northern Negro constitutes a new and ardent national political force, strong enough to get city jobs and thereby earning his first large-scale assertion of power in the Parker vote, is a question which political analysts are pondering.

EXPECT BIG INCREASE

The 1930 census figures for Negro population are not yet available, but official and non-official estimates, based on the 1920 census, indicate the New York city now has about 250,000 negroes; Philadelphia, 185,000; Chicago, 217,000 and Detroit 60,000. In 1920, less than 1,500,000 negroes lived in cities of more than 100,000. By 1920 this number had increased to 3,800,000 and it is now estimated to be well over 4,000,000. That a large proportion of this urban increase is going to northern cities is shown by the fact that in the decade from 1910 to 1920 the Negro population of Chicago increased from 2 per cent to 4.1; Philadelphia, 5.5 to 7.4; Detroit, 1.2 to 4.1; New York City, 1.9 to 2.7; Cincinnati, 5.4 to 7.5; and Cleveland, 1.5 to 4.3. It is believed the 1930 census will show similar proportionate increases, with a much greater rise in New York city.

In 1928, political reporters wrote that Tammany hall had started out to round up the Harlem Negro vote. It was in that year that Mayor Walker appointed to city offices, or perhaps more accurately, jobs, 317 negroes, more than had been appointed in all previous years of Republican administration and bringing the total of such employees on the city payroll to 1,975. Salaries totaled $2,052,373, with the highest annual salary at $7,500. In the year 1930, one Negro was given a New York city job. In succeeding years there was a slow increase, mostly in democratic administrations, culminating in Tammany's benevolent northward move in 1928. Whether the Negro vote for Mayor Walker against Fiorella H. La Guardia was attributable to this, is nevertheless, large and enthusiastic.

The American Federation of Labor has not been hospitable to the northern migration of Negroes. Between 1921 and 1924, during the labor deflation period after the war, the number of Negro locals affiliated with the federation decreased 513 per cent.

MOUNTAINS LURE HOOVER FOR SUMMER VACATION

Washington—(AP)—The mountains where as a youth he mined for gold have lured Herbert Hoover back for his summer vacation as president.

A believer in the public parks system, he was moved to accept the invitation of the National Parks service to spend the month of August in the five Rocky mountain reservations by a conviction that the trip with its resultant publicity would stimulate a beneficial interest in them. But, also he was drawn by a desire to return to the mountains to which he and Mrs. Hoover have gone many times since they left Stanford university and where for hours at a time he can wade up to his knees in secluded mountain streams casting for trout.

No sport appeals to the president as does fishing and trout fishing in a seclusion mountain stream in his particular joy. It was this hobby that led him to establish his camp on the bank of the Rapidan river in Virginia for his weekend trips.

The president expects to do most of his fishing during the western trip, which is tentatively set for August, at Glacier park in Montana. Then, working his way south by motor in easy stages, he expects to visit Yellowstone and Estes parks in succession before reaching his home at Palo Alto, Calif. Leaving there he will go to Yosemite and Grand canyon parks en route back to the capital.

Four members of America's Walker Cup team—admittedly one of the strongest ever assembled—are pictured here as they sailed from New York for England to defend the coveted trophy which is symbol of Anglo-American golf supremacy. 'Pay When You Can' Slogan Of Tiny Cafe Of Bohemians

Berlin—(AP)—The most popular haunt of Berlin's Bohemians is a tiny cafe which, although situated just off the hustle and bustle of the German capital's "Great White Way," remains unknown to bourgeois revellers in quest of nocturnal thrills.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the weed-puffing philanthropist has never lost money on account of her generosity. The enterprise prospers because the law of average always works out. Few are those to whom she extended credit who have been delinquent in liquidating their debts. When "their ship comes in," they not only pay their debts, but they feel duty-bound to celebrate the occasion by inviting the entire house to round after round of drinks.

In the not-so-long-ago, when this motherly woman decided to establish a "home" for the German capital's new generation of liberti and artists, the members of her flock were at a loss to find an appropriate name for it. No name at all, was the suggestion of the woman owner, but her admirers wished it otherwise.

A name which would proclaim her outstanding characteristic was suggested, that being her uncontrollable passion to smoke big, black cigars all day long and it was unanimously agreed to give the place the name of "The Wick." Today, both place and owner are known under that appellation to hundreds of struggling aspirants to fame in arts or letters.

To them, this perpetually smiling and smoking woman is like a brilliant star that sheds its kindly light on an unkind world steeped in sordid materialism and rank commercialism. He who lacks the wherewithal with which to buy food or drink is welcome just as much at "The Wick" as he whose pockets bulge.

"The Wick" is undoubtedly the one place in Berlin where commercialism is entirely absent. Many are known to have kept body and soul together there for days and weeks, while working on a novel or a painting. "Pay when you can,"

HUNT FIEND AS SLAYER OF IOWA SCHOOL GIRL

Des Moines—(AP)—Intensive search continued today by city and county law enforcing agencies for the slayer of Evelyn Lee, 8-year-old school girl, who was the victim of a fiendish attack Saturday night. Since her body was found in a wooded section on the outskirts of the city yesterday afternoon police have exerted every effort to find some clue that would lead to the identification of the person who kidnapped Evelyn as she was on her way home.

Six men were arrested last night and taken to headquarters for questioning. Four of them, however, were released shortly after giving alibis and police said they had no conclusive evidence against the other two.

Police centered their hunt today on one man who is believed to be the most likely suspect. It is claimed that he has molested school children

IN southeast Des Moines, scene of the crime. According to his mother, he has been missing from his home since last Friday, the night before Evelyn was abducted.

Authorities are also looking for the driver of an automobile described by L. J. Slager, a garage mechanic as a roadster with a delivery box on the rear. Slager claims he saw the machine drive up to Evelyn's home on her way home Saturday. The driver offered to take her home but she shook her head, the mechanic testified. The girl then moved out of Slager's sight.

Breaks 96 Clay Birds Out of Possible 100 in Sunday Event

Kaukauna—Harry Billett, Oconomowoc, was high scorer at the second registered clay bird shoot of this season of the Northeastern Wisconsin Trapshooting league here Sunday. C. Hayward, Weyauwega, W. L. Eisenach of Wausau and E. F. Rider of Oshkosh were tied for second place. Billett scored 96 out of a possible 100, while second place score was 94 out of a possible 100. The league here is entitled to one league prize for the season.

The handicap shoot of 25 targets was won at 14 by W. R. Hayward, Kaukauna, with a score of 22. He was also high gun for the local club with a score of 88. E. Nelson of Manitowoc won the double target event with a score of 22 out of 24 targets, thrown double.

UTILITY HEARING SET FOR MAY 20, CLERK IS ADVISED

Commission Seeks to Determine Who Has Right to Service Village

Kaukauna—An adjourned hearing before a representative of the Wisconsin Railroad commission in the investigation, on the motion of the commission, of alleged violation of chapter 136 by the Wisconsin Municipal Power company, the Kaukauna Municipal Utility and the South Shore Utility, will be held here at 9:30 Tuesday morning, May 20, according to a notice received here by L. C. Wolf, city clerk, from William Dunneen, secretary of the commission.

The hearing is being held to determine which of the three utilities has prior rights to furnish electric service to the village of Combined Locks. At present all three utilities are giving the village service.

A hearing was conducted here last Wednesday at which much testimony was heard. The South Shore Utility claimed that the Combined Locks Paper company had served the village and claimed rights to this kind of pasture after getting the land of his cattle last summer. He is now finishing the preparation of his fields for the planting of ten acres of corn and an equal acreage of silage corn. He says that all crops in his vicinity would be greatly benefited by a generous, warm rain.

Hortonville—Ed Steinberg planted a part of two acres of early cabbage before the late, heavy frosts of a week or so ago and the balance after the frosts. The late planting appears to be getting the start of the early planting. Through a local dealer, Mr. Steinberg got plants raised in Georgia. Mr. Steinberg expects to plant five acres of late potatoes in the early part of June.

DESIGN GLOVES FOR NEARLY EVERY FROCK

Even With Dinner Gown, Elbow Length Gloves Are Shown

BY ALICE LAMONT
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press New York—(CPA)—Paris has discovered that you cannot be womanly without gloves. Consequently, Jenny, the couturier, has gloves designed for nearly every sort of frock. Even with the dinner gown of crepe de chine and lace, elbow length gloves of suede or silk are shown. You get with them on too short a cuff, you prefer style to comfort. What do you bet that mitts are in the offing?

Some of the smart London houses are having their windows done over in modernistic designs. Which means that a framework of wood or plastered concrete, or overlapping plates of glass—is arranged across the top and down the sides of the window in zigzags, triangles, out lines, or what have you. The framework is usually in three colors, such as gray, rose, and black, the window curtains often are in a plain color matching one of these. The effect, with a large ungainly window, is surprisingly good.

The very cut out sandals is with us once more. Of soft, basketweave, deckshin or kid in white and in colors it has little but a vamp and a heel piece held on by a sole and strap. Though not practical for city wear it is delightful for beach or country club.

Talks To Parents

BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE
Only recently has it become a common for parents to be called to admit that they are not infallible, and these used to be no sign of childhood half so black as that of suggesting that parents were something less than perfect.

Present day knowledge of child nature has led the thoughtful mother to a highly self-critical attitude.

She feels that the task of bringing up a child is far from being the simple thing her grandmother believed to be.

The modern mother is apt to blame herself severely for her mistakes in bringing up her child. She often feels a mist of her own wisdom which shows itself in a weak and vacillating attitude in relation to the little problems of her everyday life.

She forgets that we are all bound to make mistakes and that there is nothing fatal about any of them unless the feeling of self-distrust which they engender in our minds makes us so unsure of ourselves that we become inconsistent and undependable for the child's point of view.

A mother who has no confidence in herself fills her child with a feeling of insecurity to which he reacts with naughtiness in all his forms.

It is well for us all to admit to ourselves that we make mistakes and to be ready to acknowledge to our children any specific instance of mistaken judgment or injustice.

But we must remember at the same time that it is better to act decisively even when we are not perfectly sure of the wisdom of our course than to permit the fear of making a mistake to undermine the child's background of consistency and his faith in his elders.

Of Interest To Farmers

HERE AND THERE WITH FARMERS

BY W. F. WINSEY
Hortonville—Leonard Selberg planted an acre of early potatoes last week and another acre on Friday. He expects to plant five acres of late potatoes from June 5 to June 10. As he does not believe in plunging from one cash crop to another on account of a transient difference in prices, he will plant only an acre of cabbage this spring as his first experiment. He expects to try out the red king of the hills and seed of alfalfa on his farm and five acres of new seedling are better than usual this spring. He is not only pleased with the prospect of enough high quality hay for his cattle next winter but also with a big supply of sweet clover pasture. Ten acres of this kind of pasture after getting the land of his cattle last summer is good as ever at the present time.

He is now finishing the preparation of his fields for the planting of ten acres of corn and an equal acreage of silage corn. He says that all crops in his vicinity would be greatly benefited by a generous, warm rain.

Hortonville—Ed Steinberg planted a part of two acres of early cabbage before the late, heavy frosts of a week or so ago and the balance after the frosts. The late planting appears to be getting the start of the early planting. Through a local dealer, Mr. Steinberg got plants raised in Georgia. Mr. Steinberg expects to plant five acres of late potatoes in the early part of June.

New London—Strawberry plants, cherry and apple trees, are in full blossom and bees are working over time. Glasses, small grain and canning peas are depriving the fields with even shade of green and trees are waving full grown leaves and scattering seeds in the breezes. Early planted cabbage plants are beginning to show in distinct rows. Farmers with two, three and four horse teams are preparing the fields for planting the balance of the corn, cabbage and potatoes. The temperature is just right for all growing plants but rain is needed.

Henry Schaefer who was cutting selected seed potatoes of uniform size Friday forenoon, said that if small scrubby potatoes are planted year after year the type will run out and that it is as necessary to feed potatoes as it is to plant them. He expects to plant an acre of potatoes and to feed the plants with 12 1/2 commercial fertilizer.

If he succeeds in raising enough cabbage plants this spring, Mr. Schaefer expects to plant 30 acres of cabbage.

BERRY GROWERS MEET AT NEW LONDON MAY 16

New London—C. L. Kuehner, fruit peddler of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture and County Agent Gus Zell will be the principal speakers at a mass meeting of members of the New London Berry Growers' association, fruit growers, merchants and consumers, in the city hall New London on Friday, May 16.

At the annual meeting of the New London Berry Growers' Association held in Hortonville Monday night officers were elected and plans for the present year were adopted. The officers elected are: Edward Bueker, president; J. L. Loe, vice president; S. Veeger, secretary; treasurer and M. F. Abraham and V. Edminister, trustees.

An effective marketing cooperative in the New London territory would dispose of surplus at the peak of the season break up competition among growers, prevent the loss of the time of all growers in peddling berries and hunting consumers, improve grading, make berries available in quantity for outside buyers and increase the number of berry growers in the New London district. These are the arguments of the berry growers who experimented with cooperative marketing on a large scale last year.

This test is an Eye-opener

even to hard-boiled mechanics

Men who know motors appreciate the low carbon forming feature of New Iso-Vis Motor Oil. Here is the carbon formed by various oils under the same conditions—New Iso-Vis at the left. It is only about 1/2 of the average carbon deposit from various premium-priced oils.

FAR LESS than the normal wear was found in the parts of this engine after 9,000 mile test run on New Iso-Vis. That shows the all-around efficiency of this improved motor oil that will not thin out in your crankcase.

JUST how much does the amount of carbon in your engine depend upon the kind of oil you use? Here is a test that has surprised even experienced mechanics.

To make this test we took an engine out of a car, placed it on blocks in the laboratory, and ran it under exactly the same conditions with various brands of lubricating oil, including New Iso-Vis. Each oil was given a 50-hour test.

At the end of each 50-hour run, every bit of carbon was removed from pistons and cylinders and accurately measured.

New Iso-Vis not only deposited a minimum of carbon but this carbon was actually 50% less than the average carbon deposit of the better grade oils tested.

But this is only one of the results of the special refining process by which this new type oil is made. It has a wider temperature range. It lubricates effectively at low temperatures and all the way up to temperatures far beyond the highest on your gauge.

Moreover, New Iso-Vis is the only motor oil that will not thin out in your crankcase. Every motorist familiar with the diluted condition of motor oil after a few hundred miles in the crankcase will appreciate what this means. New Iso-Vis is actually as heavy and oily when you drain it off as when you first put it in.

Any Standard Oil dealer or service station attendant will be glad to drain your crankcase, flush and refill with New Iso-Vis Motor Oil.

MANY GREAT LAKES VESSELS NOW HAVE RADIO APPARATUS

About Half of Boats Boast of Receiving, Transmitting Equipment

Duluth, Minn.—(P)—There has been a noticeable increase in the number of larger vessels plying the Great Lakes that have been equipped with radio receiving and transmitting apparatus, with an estimate of between 325 and 350 of the more than 700 boats operating on the lakes having radio equipment.

While radio communication on the Great Lakes was started more than 20 years ago, it has been only during the last few years that large carriers have been installing radio equipment, according to ship men here, and they believe the day is not far distant when, every craft on the Great Lakes, including the small fishing boats, will be radio-equipped.

While the principal value of the radio stations operated on the Great Lakes by the Radio Corporation of America is in times of danger, during which time they keep in constant communication with the ship's operation, weather, reports, storm and hydrographic warnings, and personal as well as business messages are transmitted.

Stations of the company on the Great Lakes are at Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo and here and are operated on 24-hour schedules.

About 60 per cent of the American and Canadian boats that are equipped with radio have sensitive tube sets, and the apparatus is declared so efficient, it is possible for the Duluth station to keep in constant touch with boats as far as the Soo Locks, 400 miles.

The local station operates on a 730 meter wave length for ships, and so does not interfere with radios in the home, which receive broadcast programs on wave lengths ranging from 200 to 550 meters. The change by several vessel companies installing tube equipment instead of the older spark type has resulted in bringing to a minimum interference with broadcast programs.

While the radio has proven of great aid in vessel movement on the Great Lakes, the ancient fog-horn, which brings protests from residents of port cities, continues to play a big part in directing the path of ships to port. The grumbling bellows that come from pier on pier

Great Lakes are often intended for vessels as far as five miles from the harbor, and while the noise "creates a disturbance" the messages that are sent often times are responsible for a craft coming into port without an accident.

The radio, vessel men here point out, will never result in the discontinuance of the fog-horn, for as long as boats travel, that system of signal will continue, although it is noted that the large increase in boats being radio-equipped has resulted in less frequent "operations" of the fog-horn.

HUGHES RESIGNATION FROM WORLD COURT ACCEPTED AT GENEVA

League Council Votes Special Election in Fall to Name Successor

Geneva.—(P)—The resignation of Charles Evans Hughes from the Permanent Court of International Justice Monday was accepted by the council of the league of Nations as its first important act after assembling under the presidency of Vojislav Marinkovich, Yugoslavian foreign minister.

The council voted to hold a special election at the next assembly in September to elect a successor to Mr. Hughes.

Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, sat in the council for the first time.

In the normal course of events Caesar Zumbato of Venezuela would have been chairman of the session but he wished to preside at the next September session of the league assembly, and waived his rights here to that meeting; the Yugoslavian member agreeing to change places with him.

The council, convening for its 58th session Monday, faced agenda which may require ten days of close consideration.

While no new business of primary interest awaits action at this meeting, the council will discuss a number of important questions must be prepared for submission to the assembly in September.

HEAR "TARIFF" REPORT

The council will hear a report on the "preliminary conference for concerted economic action"—formerly known as the tariff truce conference. This diplomatic gathering, called in London in 1928, was a scheme for a limited degree of international cooperation which, it is hoped, will lead eventually to progressive removal of obstacles to trade.

The proposed amendments to the league covenant, drawn by a committee of jurists with a view to bringing the covenant into harmony with the Kellogg pact outlawing war, will be placed before the council.

Now Is Time To Get Busy With Your Trees, Shrubs

If you have been dreaming of the wonderful things you would do in the spring with trees and shrubs and vines and flowers, it is high time to get busy. If you haven't prepared a definite plan of procedure don't wait another minute. The folks who can help you in making a plan or selecting plants to use are going to be pulling through a swamp of rushy activity pretty soon, for it's a short season and there is a lot to be done.

The earlier you get started, the earlier your plant orders are looked up and you get delivery just so much earlier in the season, before growth is started enough to involve a setback for the season's development.

Failure to plant this spring means the loss of a whole year's time. You must plant in the spring if you want to take advantage of the growing season of 1930. Then, too, if you plant this spring you can enjoy the improvements all summer.

IT'S NOT TOO LATE TO PLAN PROPERLY

If you haven't planned anything on your grounds yet to this time, give a little time to re-considering your scheme of planting which is useful, quiet and dignified throughout. Don't fill up your front lawn, unless you dislike having people see your house. A neat border or hedge along the front property line is all right. The main idea is to keep low plants like shrubs out of the center and use trees to frame the house. The trees like elms or maples are used to soften the sharp lines of the architecture.

assistance to a country which is attacked or threatened with attack. Most of the powers favor this scheme in principle, but some political differences regarding its application remain to be adjusted.

The council will also discuss the League of Nations' request for a conference of signatory states to seek means for limiting into force the convention for supervision of international trade in arms and munitions. This treaty was formed in 1925 but has been imperative for want of sufficient ratifications by signatory states.

The work of the league's organizations concerned with opium traffic, traffic in women, child welfare, public health, and other social and humanitarian problems will be presented through various reports, which will be discussed in these fields.

SIMPLICITY IS THE KEYNOTE OF BEAUTY

Just as a person must have character and individuality to be interesting, just so must the home grounds be distinctly characteristic of the owner. This does not mean that your place should be freakish and attract attention by placing gaudy flower beds along the front of the house, but it should have some decided expression or tone. For instance, one would not expect a little old New England lady to have the same kind of place that a business man would desire in developing his own place. Do not try to copy either place, but give yourself away and use on your property the plants you desire.

A garden may be distinguished by its variety of time. This may be produced in summer, by having a variety of showy flowers and by means of brilliant flowering shrubs. This does not mean that we should violate the rules of planting by placing Geranium beds in the middle of the lawn, or Colons beds along the base of the house. In winter the same law can be secured by planting evergreens or by using shrubs with cherry berries and bright twigs. The character of the winter phase should be light, open, airy—not at all crowded or overblown.

The expression of the garden may be, if required, modest, massing and simple. It need not be wanting in beauty or refinement.

Your home grounds should never represent poverty, rambles or aimlessness. There is no need of a place expressing poverty, no matter how small a place or how limited the means, the place can be executed to represent cleanliness, harmony and calm. There is nothing more beautiful than the little garden made by some old lady upon a small patch of land at the door. It represents care and desire for things beautiful, and to some it would represent more than the huge brilliant estates of our millionaires. Simplicity and straightness in a place can be easily remedied, for if there are not enough plants available to plant the place fully, the plants on hand can be used in sufficiently thick masses which will look much better than a few plants, thoughtlessly scattered here and there.

Murder at High Tide

By CHARLES G. BOOTH

SYNOPSIS: Dan Parados, fear-inspiring despot of his isolated estate on San Lucas Island, seems hated by his whole household. His secretary, pretty Celia Ferris, is terror-stricken in his presence. Claude Annersley, Celia's sweetheart, displays strange agitation. Parados sneeringly dominates Miss Jahries, the housekeeper. Into this atmosphere of sinister dread comes Allen Hunt, young antique dealer, to appraise Parados' art collection. The ominous thundering of The Gut, a nearby fissure of water, disturbs Hunt as much as the queer behavior he finds at every turn. Noting that a certain glass case is empty, Parados himself seems overcome by a ghastly terror. Sending the mystified Hunt to his room, Parados enters his library, saying he won't be at dinner that night.

Chapter 2
It was a pleasant room into which the housekeeper took me. Windows looked south and west. The south window, of the French type, was open, and gave access to a flat roof. The library was underneath, I thought.

"Life must be pleasant on San Lucas, Miss Jahries," I remarked. "Do you think so?" Miss Jahries answered. "We have dinner at eight, Mr. Hunt."

While I dressed I pondered over the curious human behavior I had noticed since I had entered the house. I wondered if there was a connection between Parados' attitude towards Celia and Annersley's unexpected appearance, and Parados' panic when he looked at the glass case and his abominable treatment of Miss Jahries. If there was, might not these incidents tie up with that sense of "wrongness" I had felt on the island?

Seven o'clock found me with an hour on my hands. I ought to have gone downstairs, but I stepped to the window.

The roof, an oblong open on two sides, along which a low parapet ran, looked south and west. On the west side a stair descended to a cliff.

I had a pretty good idea of my surroundings. The cove indenting the southwest corner. Parados had built his home on the north side of the cove; the ruin of the fort Velasquez had built was on the south side. A light indicated the location of the fort tower. Evidently it was occupied by whom?

The fort was a hundred yards or so wide; the light was perhaps twice that distance from where I stood. Unless The Gut was bridged—and I had seen no bridge—it would be necessary to walk around the head of The Gut, a considerable distance, to get from the house to the fort.

I began to dip up what I knew of the island's history. The original estate had been granted to the father of Don Ramon by the King of Spain about 1810. San Lucas Island had been thrown in with it. The Velasquez prospered until the Americans began to blow over the horizon. Don Ramon built the fort on San Lucas as a protest against the Yankee invasion. When California joined the Union, Don Ramon withdrew to San Lucas Island and lived in the fort until his death. His grandson died without heir in the nineties. Meanwhile, the mainland estate had been lost. The island was sold for debt and Parados bought it cheap around 1912.

I happened to glance at the cliffs below. There had been no one there a moment before. I was sure of that. As a figure moved in front of what I supposed was the west window of the library, I saw it was a girl. She drew closer to the window and peered in.

"I wonder what she's after?" I muttered. I had a notion she did not belong to the house. Parados had told me the Brent collection was in the room beyond the library, suddenly, the girl vanished.

I ran down the stair, passed the library window, the shades of which were drawn, and came to the second window. The shades were drawn, but not together.

I did not see the girl. The Brent pottery was spread on a billiard table in the center of the library. I touched one door of the window. It opened noiselessly. The girl appeared in the center of the room.

She was holding one of the eels, looking at it intently. The subject was the head and shoulders of an old lady with red-apple cheeks and a white collar and an indomitable air that made you look twice at her.

As I looked at the girl again I made a discovery. She had a lovely mouth, and deep blue eyes and bronze hair beneath her small black hat. And as I looked at the old lady again I knew where she had got her features.

The girl suddenly opened a leather bag, took out a small knife and plunged it through the canvas of the portrait, close to the frame. I burst into the room.

"You mustn't do that!" I shouted. "That isn't your property."

She cried out and would have dropped the picture if I had not caught it.

A second of silence hung between us. I felt sick about it. She had taken hold of me in a way I could not explain.

"Where did you come from?" I inquired.

"Where did you come from?" she countered defiantly.

"You don't belong to the house, do you?"

"Do you?"

"You must have wanted it pretty badly," I said encouragingly.

Her eyes filled with tears.

"Her eyes ever want anything very much?"

"Perhaps I shall one of these days."

A man cannot always stop the indiscretions that bubble up when a pretty girl puts him off his guard. I thought she would be angry; instead, she smiled.

"I suppose you think I'm a thief?"

"As a rule," I said, "a thief does not steal his grandmother's portrait."

"You think I am like her?" she demanded radantly.

"Let me see," I said critically.

"Yes, there is a decided resemblance. The eyes are the same. Your nose turns up a trifle more, but your mouths are identical--and all that mouths should be--"

"Oh, please," she protested laughing.

"But of course they are," I insisted. "And that indomitable look."

"I admit the look. My stubbornness made me do it."

"And now," I said gently, "you will tell me why you did it."

A door closed softly. I had not heard it open.

"Precisely!" a soprano voice said. "Mademoiselle is swift with her knife. She has much to tell us." (Copyright, 1930, William Morrow and Company)

Who is this girl prowler? Her surprising identity--and her unusual mission--are revealed tomorrow.

Arms Pact Best Under Present Conditions--Stimson

PARITY TO BE CHIEF ISSUE QUIZ REVEALS

Comparison of American With British Fleets Subject Before Committee

Washington—(AP)—Facing smilingly the first salvo of senate opposition to the London naval treaty, Secretary Stimson again assured the foreign relations committee today that the pact not only was a "fair settlement" but the best that could be negotiated under present world conditions.

British-American parity had a major place in the day's session. Committee members manifested a particular desire to know whether the treaty negotiated by Mr. Stimson and his colleagues really places the American and British fleets on an equal basis. The secretary insisted stoutly that it does.

Evidence accumulated that the question of parity would bulk large in such opposition as may develop. The administration leaders do not expect that opposition to menace ratification, but were convinced today that much debate is ahead.

To accommodate the crowds which overflowed yesterday's opening session the committee moved today into a larger hearing room.

Stimson began by saying he intended to take up the strength of the fleets by individual categories.

Senator Swanson, Democrat, Virginia, interposed the first question. He asked if the American delegation considered the "war" power of the fleets or the "commercial protection."

"We took the two fleets," Stimson answered, "and estimated their substantial combat power."

ASKS ABOUT PROTECTION

Was any consideration given as to whether parity gave ample protection to the commerce of the United States?" persisted Swanson.

Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, one of the American delegates, remarked that protection of commerce was "inseparable" from other elements of naval warfare and therefore was necessarily considered, Stimson agreed.

Senator Robinson, Republican, Indiana, wanted to know if Great Britain would not have an advantage by converting her great fleet of commercial ships into fighting craft.

"Try and figure that out," Stimson said, "Let us hear what you would do."

"I am trying to do that," replied the Indiana. "I don't understand why we are giving up five of our ten thousand ton cruisers."

"It was absolutely impossible to measure the potential war time strength of commercial vessels."

"Was there any naval expert at London who thought there was not equality in the plan agreed upon?" asked Swanson.

"There was not," replied Stimson. The witness insisted the net result was to bring the American navy from a position of "inferiority" to one of "equality." He said equality in battleships would be reached sooner under the London treaty than under the present Washington treaty and Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, who was a delegate at London, suggested that battleships now to be scrapped by Great Britain had larger calibre guns than those to be scrapped by the United States.

The battleship scrapping provisions of the London treaty, the secretary said, would mean a saving of $100,000,000.

RICH RANCHER HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Californian Accused of Murdering Driver of Taxicab During Ride

San Francisco—(AP)—A first degree murder charge was filed here today against J. Warren Dutton, 36, wealthy Mendocino, Calif., rancher, who yesterday shot and killed Robert Arnold, 20, driver of a taxicab in which Dutton was riding.

Following his arrest Dutton told an incoherent story of the shooting. At first Dutton claimed Arnold had influenced Mrs. Dutton to divorce him. Later he declared Arnold was a member of a "dope ring" which had his wife under its influence.

Finally he admitted he had never seen Arnold before. He insisted his pistol was loaded with blank cartridges.

After the shooting Dutton fled from the cab but later gave himself up. He became hysterical when officers attempted to put him in a cell, ripping a telephone from the wall and shouting threats.

Dutton's wife, the former Katherine Fletcher of San Rafael, Calif., brought suit for divorce at Ukiah, three months ago, charging mental and physical cruelty. She was admitted as a patient at the University of California hospital here a few days ago.

Frenchmen Carry Air Mail Over Ocean To S. America

Rio Janeiro—(AP)—Bringing with them the first trans-Atlantic air mail to South America, Jean Mermoz, French aviator, and two companions landed at 6:12 a. m. (3:12 a. m. Appleton time) today at Natal, near the northeastern tip of the continent.

The landing completed a flight of about 1,700 miles from St. Louis, Senegal, which is near the far eastern tip of Africa. It took 21 hours and 12 minutes, more than an hour longer than the aviators had expected would be necessary.

The plane, a postal hydro-airplane, left Perpignan, France, May 2 for St. Louis. When departing at noon yesterday for Natal it picked up air mail which had been brought Saturday night from Paris, by plane and took it across the Atlantic. This lap of the Europe-South American airmail heretofore has been made in fast destroyers.

All was not easy flying for the plane. The first part of its trip was easy, but once near the middle of the journey the aviators radioed that the cabin of their plane was nearly filled with rain which fell during a storm through which they had just passed.

They passed over Fernando do Noronha, where there is a Brazilian penal colony at 5:45 a. m. G. M. T. (11:45 p. m. Appleton time), but needed nearly two hours and a half to negotiate the remaining 125 miles or more of their journey. When passing Fernando do Noronha they radioed that they expected to arrive at Natal at 4:20 a. m. Eastern Brazilian time, which would have been 1:20 a. m. Appleton time.)

Aboard the plane with Mermoz are: M. d'Arny, navigator, and M. Guimie, radio operator. Several fliers already have flown the short southern course of 1,700 miles from the Atlantic African coast to the southwestern tip of South America.

SAYS ISLAND INDEPENDENCE IS BIG ISSUE

Minnesotan Says Action Now Will Prevent Agitation During 1932

Washington—(AP)—A prediction that unless some action of the Philippine independence question is taken at this session of congress, "the question will be one of the paramount issues of the 1932 campaign," was made in the house today by Representative Knutson, Republican, Minnesota.

The agricultural sections of the country will rally to the support of the party that comes out unequivocally for the early independence of the islands, said the Minnesotan, who is author of a resolution to grant the Philippines their freedom.

Knutson added he had served notice on the insular committee, to which his measure was referred, that unless it is acted upon and referred to the house, he will invoke the rules to take the resolution from the committee and bring it direct to the floor of the house for consideration.

During his argument largely up to the economic phase of the question the Minnesotan said:

"I am in favor of the immediate independence of the Philippine islands because their retention adversely affects American agriculture and labor. Last year we imported something like seven hundred million pounds of vegetable oils from the islands. This enormous quantity of oil was used in the manufacture of butter substitutes and soaps and therefore entered into direct competition with our dairy interests and swine raisers. I have no doubt but that the present low price in butter and lard is due largely to this enormous importation of vegetable oils.

"The Philippine islands also exported to the United States between 500 and 600 million tons of sugar, displacing an equal amount of American grown beet and cane sugar. So long as the islands can continue to export to the United States vegetable oil and sugar duty free, so long will the American farmer continue to pay the bill for their occupation.

"Not only does the Philippine farmer compete with the American farmer, but the Filipino who comes to the United States to work is a keen and serious competitor for the American laboring man."

"In addition to affecting us adversely from the economic angle, they are also an ever present menace to our peace. With the retention of the Philippines it is necessary to maintain greater naval and military strength than would be the case did we not have the Philippine islands, and I dare say that our experience with them has cost the American taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars."

YOU'RE NOT ALLOWED TO CHEW UP STREETS OF CALIFORNIA CITY

Ventura, Calif.—(AP)—Children's joyful tar chewing has caused considerable damage to Ventura city streets. The city has issued an edict against it, and the motorcycle police have been called out to enforce it.

The trouble all began when a small boy picked up a piece of tar from the street. He chewed it, and decided it strengthened and cleaned his teeth, thus eliminating the toil and trouble attending upon daily brushing.

Playmates were told the pleasing information. Raids on the pride of the street department became common, through cracks in highways and disintegration began.

Then came the edict; also the cops.

ARREST APPLETON MAN ON CHARGES OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Gerald LaMais Secured Money to Get Married, Police Report

Gerald LaMais, 29, an employee at the West Side Tire Shop, 607 W. College-ave was held at the police station Tuesday morning pending his arraignment in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg in the afternoon on charges of embezzlement.

LaMais is charged with stealing $71.63 from his employers last week. After taking the money, according to the police, LaMais went to Waukegan, Ill., with an Appleton girl to get married. When they reached that city, however, LaMais told the girl where he got the cash and she refused to marry him, returning to her home here, police reported.

The former tire salesman followed and when police learned he was in the city they went to his boarding house Monday to arrest him. LaMais was found by Sgt. Matthew McGinnis hiding behind a chimney in the attic. As the officer led him downstairs LaMais broke away and went headfirst through a window in an effort to escape—but he reckoned without Officer Radtke, who was on duty outside.

Officer Radtke quickly caught LaMais and held him.

OILS LEAD EFFORT TO RALLY STOCKS ON NEW YORK MART

Favorable Conditions in Petroleum Field Held Responsible for Strength

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor
New York (P)—Efforts were made to lift the stock market out of its narrow trading rut today, with the oil shares providing the speculative fire. Trading during the first hour was the dulllest in several weeks, with only a few of the utility, food and specialty issues showing notable vitality, but after midday, a strong buying movement in the petroleum issues began to drag the list upward, and were joined by utilities and steels.

The oils have been somewhat retarded during the recovery from the latest break, owing to renewed difficulties in bringing the smaller producers into line with the conservation movement, in California, but it was announced today that Santa Fe Springs operators, with the exception of a few, had agreed to curtail output to 57 per cent of potential capacity. Furthermore, a survey of drilling operations in California discloses that major operators have curtailed activity by 40 to 50 per cent.

There has also been some talk of further gasoline price increases in the east, although Wall Street understands leading refiners may delay such action for a time, as it would probably be followed by advances in mid-continent crude quotations. For the year to date, consumption of petroleum products has been running 8 to 10 per cent ahead of last year, although earlier in the year it was stated in oil circles that a 5 per cent gain would be satisfactory.

The day's business reports were in general moderately favorable. The export copper price was put up to 13.2 cents a pound, in response to the advance in the domestic price to 12 cents yesterday. Wall Street, however, was inclined to regard the copper stocks somewhat cautiously, as estimates indicate that production costs are around 11 cents a pound. Reports from the automotive trade indicated that sales had picked up appreciably in several lines since the first of May, and that dealer stocks are low. A few new models are expected to appear around July 1, largely in the 5-cylinder class.

George Reynolds, chairman of the Continental Illinois Trust Co., was quoted as stating on his return to Chicago from a visit to the Pacific coast that business there was slow, and for the country in general, he expected second quarter results would compare unfavorably with first year, but that agricultural conditions were satisfactory for this time of year and that growing crops would soon become a factor in the outlook. W. P. Warren, president of Jaff Printing, pointed to an increase in volume of large national magazines as an indication that conservative optimism is increasing.

In the oils, Standard of N. J., Standard of Kansas, General Asphalt, Houston and the Pen American issues, mounted about 2 to 4 points, the last named reaching new 1930 peaks. U. S. Steel and A. M. Ryers sold up more than 2 points, and Michigan Steel surged up several points to new high ground. Shares gaining about 2 to 5 points included Du Pont, Underwood, Eastman Kodak, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Columbia Gas, Coca Cola, Macy, Sears Roebuck, American and Foreign Powder, and Electric Power and Light.

Union Detinning, a lightly traded issue, shot up more than 20 points. Shares gaining 10 or more included Case and International Salt. Earnings of the latter are said to be running about double the rate of this time last year, and the stock has doubled in price since the first of the year.

Buying on a large scale, of half a dozen industrial stocks maintained the upward trend of prices in the late afternoon, although the general volume was considerably below recent averages. U. S. Steel and A. M. Ryers sold up more than 2 points, and Michigan Steel surged up several points to new high ground. Shares gaining about 2 to 5 points included Du Pont, Underwood, Eastman Kodak, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Columbia Gas, Coca Cola, Macy, Sears Roebuck, American and Foreign Powder, and Electric Power and Light.
